

The Living Canvas: An e-Twinning Adventure

by Thomas Van Reusel

Sophie, a bright-eyed student from Collège Galilée in France, adjusted her webcam. Today was the day! She and her classmates were about to meet students from Spain and Turkey for an exciting e-Twinning project.

The screen flickered to life, revealing faces from IES La Basilica and Doğanşehir Fen Lisesi. Smiling, Sophie felt a thrill of anticipation as the project, 'Living Paintings,' was introduced: recreating famous artworks through posing.

First up were the French students. Karel, a football and FIFA enthusiast, shared his passion. Then, Salah, with his love for boxing and couscous, introduced himself with a big smile.

Dado, who loved to cook and take pictures, explained how much she enjoyed the e-Twinning project. Selmata, a sports and reading fan, thought the project was wonderfully creative.

Mamadou, a football fanatic with Ronaldo as his idol, eagerly spoke. Ashwin, with his love for sports and video games, told everyone about his family.

Raakesh, also a football and karate fan, showed off his Nintendo Switch, while Naolee shared her love for dance and cooking, and her belief that eTwinning was more fun than regular classes.

Kenza, with her love for pasta and Spanish, saw the project as a great way to learn languages. Byron, dreaming of a career with animals, shared his love for anime and reading.

Yanis, a goalkeeper, talked about his favorite food and football teams. Ozan, from Turkey, showed off his drawing skills and favorite game, Dark Souls III. Yogeshvari, from India, also joined the presentation.

Lina, a Harry Potter fan, and Nelson, who dreamt of being a pastry chef, completed the French introductions. Salma, who loved travelling and English movies, talked about the creativity of the project.

Finally, Abisan, Esther, Ly Lan and others were introduced. They all expressed excitement about the project, the opportunity to communicate internationally, and the chance to make new friends. The students from the three countries began to form lasting bonds, promising a future filled with collaborative creativity.
