Aruzha, with her bright pink VR glasses on, sat on her bed. Her room, filled with posters and books, vanished as she pressed the 'on' button.

Suddenly, she was standing in a futuristic classroom. The walls pulsed with colorful lights, and holographic words floated gently in the air, spelling out 'HELLO!'.

A friendly, cartoon-like avatar of her teacher, Miss Lily, appeared at the front, beaming. "Welcome to our English lesson, class!" she announced, her voice warm and clear.

"Today, we will learn new words through a journey!" Miss Lily clicked a button, and the classroom floor shimmered, transforming into a vibrant, swirling portal.

With a whoosh, Aruzha and her classmates found themselves on a bustling virtual London street. Red double-decker buses whizzed by, and the iconic Big Ben stood tall in the distance.

Miss Lily pointed to a red bus. "This is a bus! Can everyone say 'bus'?" Aruzha giggled, repeating the word with her virtual friends.

Next, they zoomed to a famous landmark. "And this, children, is a clock!" Miss Lily explained, gesturing towards Big Ben. Its grand face showed the time, clear for all to see.

The journey continued, taking them past historic buildings and lively parks. Each new sight brought a new word, making learning feel like an exciting game.

Aruzha felt a surge of excitement. Learning English in the metaverse was so much more fun than just sitting at a desk. She was truly exploring!

As the lesson ended, Aruzha found herself back in her room, a wide smile on her face. She couldn't wait for her next virtual English adventure!
