

Mittens' Big City Adventure

by Mari

Mittens, a fluffy calico cat, lived her whole life in a quiet countryside. She knew every tree, every field, and every mouse in her familiar world. One stormy night, a loud crash and bright lights scared her away from her cozy home.

Running blindly, Mittens stumbled and tumbled through the darkness. She ended up on a busy road, the lights and sounds of cars completely overwhelming her. Everything was new and scary.

Lost and alone, Mittens cautiously explored her new surroundings. Tall buildings scraped the sky and strange smells filled the air. She spotted a group of pigeons pecking at some breadcrumbs, but she was too shy to approach.

Suddenly, a friendly dog with floppy ears bounded over, wagging its tail. His name was Buster, and he was a city dog, used to all the chaos. He seemed excited to have a new friend.

Buster showed Mittens around, introducing her to a grumpy old alley cat named Patches, and a sassy squirrel named Nutsy. Mittens slowly began to find her confidence, and enjoyed new experiences.

In time, Mittens found a small, hidden garden where she could relax and feel safe. She made friends, learned to navigate the city, and even found a cozy spot under a warm bakery window. The big city wasn't so scary after all!
